

Thursday, November 30, 2000 - 8:00 AM

You will not change the world; you can only note that it is beset by all sorts of ideas received, taboos and manipulations.

"The human being cannot always be discriminating. He is made to follow erroneous theories. Because of lack of actually understanding the problems, he advances in the general movement. In the medicine area that interests you, it is true that it reduces to the psyche whatever it can't work out regarding the complexity of human functioning. It is said to play a major role, which it does not have; it is only part of the mechanism.

"The human being does not create his own diseases. His mind represents an acting force, but other decisive factors are also taken into consideration, but they are ignored in the current state of medical knowledge. Much time will still be necessary so that the genuine trigger of disharmony between the various organs of the body is recognized as being the cause of most diseases.

"It is useless to take this route and to raise arguments that would not be admitted by a majority of people, trapped in the current theories. For those who are convinced of the prevailing system of thoughts, those arguments come close to being merely imaginative."

Babuji