With regard to his successor, my son must wait again till our projects materialize. He should not be impatient, even though he is not anymore, as he says, the 'lion of days gone by.' For the time being, only he is capable of managing the situation. His experience and shrewdness cannot solve everything, who could do so? Man's stupidity is limitless. We act for the best of the Mission's interests. He should be at peace; we will shortly speak to him.

"Your desire to satisfy him is commendable, my daughter, but we do not solve problems according to appearances and laws governing this world. All these mechanisms are of great complexity. Nothing related to human behaviour is simple. This year will be beneficial to the Mission. It will be the period when structures will be established, which will be decisive for the future.

"My son's hopes will certainly be fulfilled, even though, while on this Earth, he cannot really imagine what enlightenment our way will provide to men of coming times. He will have been the Master who, thanks to his grand contribution, will have laid the most significant foundation stones of the edifice."
