Saturday, March 10, 2001 - 4:00 PM

These prophecies are to be taken as they stand: hope for the future. A stronger race more advanced and respectful of true values will arise. That is how the future will be shaped. Those beings will evolve differently and their objective won't be money any more. That is enough to make some of you dream, those who did not believe that this kind of prospect could happen. Man of future ages will not resemble today's man, neither body-wise, nor mind-wise.

"That race, the result of an important mutation, will start its path between two worlds: a long way at the service of the Great Beings who reign over the solar system, orchestrating the planets' movement and the harmony that must exist in the cosmos. The supreme strength of this vibration governs the worlds; the least deficiency brings about chain reactions.

"Infinity, coming back to it, is not a shapeless and lifeless mass without reference points. It is beyond your reach and comprehension. It is actually infinite insofar as it is not measurable. That is a truth that doesn't enlighten you at your current stage but which, in the future, might reasonably be clearer."

Babuji