A Fourth Revelation

Always look towards the future by seeing it as positive, whatever the current situation.

"History, in general, is made up of periods of crisis which occur in all the aspects of life; this rule applies in all circumstances.

"Man, generally, is exceeded by some events he cannot control. He is carried away like a wisp of straw and must resign himself to undergoing them.

"What can he do in the face of the great tragedies that may emerge in his life: death, cataclysms, big social plagues or any other personal ordeal? Act when he can, undergo most of the time, but pray – always. This reaction will help him, inspire him about the action to be taken and reassure him. Meditating, being before himself and letting inspiration guide him, will restore calm in him. He will be able to better take the opportunities which arise and to use them advisedly.

"Do not fail to help your brothers in such situations. They must face adversity today; tomorrow will perhaps be your turn. Try to be lucid, understanding and effective by helping them as best you can.

"It happened that you, in trying moments of your life, received unhoped-for assistance and you regarded them as blessings. Therefore, try to remember and to follow your heart."
