Friday, July 20, 2001 - 10:00 a.m.

The results emerging in your circle must encourage you to continue as long as possible. You have noticed that these messages touch hearts; with the passage of time, they suffuse into them and contribute to their transformation. This work is carried out slowly, as the opening generated by these writings takes place. You can already witness their impact and imagine what they will provide when they are more widely read. They will be appreciated differently according to the culture of the countries where they will be disseminated. The state of mind of human beings varies from one continent to another.

"Wherever they may be proposed for reading, people will not remain indifferent to them. Believe me, my dear daughter; these writings will help your brothers and sisters, whatever their race and skin colour. The same rule applies to all living creatures here below. Do not lose heart, my daughter; you must honour your contract to the end.

"Be blessed."
