Monday, July 23, 2001 - 8:00 a.m.

As you have noted yourself, unlike these messages, some of our books are not easy to read. We already told you: the truth is simple and does not burden itself with complicated formulas. It must be understood by everyone, which is what makes for its richness. By including these writings in our teaching, we will offer to our aspirants a wide scope of possibilities, according to everyone's aspirations. This teaching should not be reserved for a few; it must be able to touch hearts, without distinction of race and education level. The sacred texts of the past, which are a reference in some religions, are accessible to all by their simplicity – this is worth emphasising. Men of letters are getting rare in your societies; they don't have long hours any more to reflect on readings with abstruse content, as well as to reflect on their spiritual development. This century will completely change habits; the day-to-day way of living will be very different. All will have to be readily accessible and understandable. Our comments will touch the hearts that will find time to focus on them for their own greatest good."

Babuji