Yes, let us repeat it to you: we like your rebellions, followed by such a beautiful surrender. Rebellions are only human; we also experienced them on this Earth. The ensuing surrender is deep and truly felt, just like the calm after the storm, which is soothing.

"In those moments when the heart finds again the joy of loving and giving, a song rises towards God, a merry melody expressing gratitude; all is possible on this sea of serenity. Storms are unavoidable; it is the law of the elements governing this planet, and man is subjected to their effects. He becomes agitated and calms down according to the currents leading his life. When he again finds peace in his heart, he enjoys these blessed moments when he feels so close to his God, to His sublime presence in him. In those moments, the osmosis is rare and complete.

"All is well, child, so He may seem to tell him: may your heart be fulfilled, since it loves above all.

"Whatever happens, never stop cultivating love in your heart; this flower, rare among all, is precious in the eyes of the Creator."
