Molecular structures of people, in general, are not configured to face this standardised life in which electronics govern the smallest details. For some people, the necessity to face up to things will elicit a real shock. Part of the population will adapt, but the gap will widen and leave behind those who will not be able to follow. When will this race stop? Time, in its legendary wisdom, will replace this planet in its own manner, sweeping away this devastating civilisation when the time comes.

You, our aspirants, need not be worried. Your progress cannot cause you to fall; quite the contrary, it raises you above the worrying pollution of this world and protects you from its excesses. You are giving a profound meaning to your life. You organise your human businesses as well as possible, and you have the wisdom to devote a good part of your time to spiritual matters, whose real meaning has not escaped your attention. You will all make a success of your lives, since you preserve what is essential by giving it its true place. Be blessed and at peace – all is well.
