Whispers from The Brighter World

A Third Revelation

Sunday, September 30, 2001 - 10:00 a.m.

I, also, have struggled hopelessly to continue to act with a defective physical body during the last years of my lifetime on Earth! My spiritual work was not affected by that; it had in terms of power what, humanly, I could not give any more.

"This aspect should not be neglected; the value of a human being, his mission, should not be measured in terms of his physical strength. There are other criteria, much more important, which escape men's appreciation. Any life must be respected; it serves a cause, even if its apparent uselessness makes it scorned by many of your fellow creatures.

"Who knows the mysteries of life, its extensions, and its usefulness in the subtle planes of a higher order? What do you know, what grounds do you have for your judgement? You must accept all the manifestations of life, until the end. This is how a sensible being must react in the face of the aberration of certain situations.

"Become truly aware of your ignorance. Man believes his knowledge is strong and flawless. Man is blind; he cannot discern the truth, which is not based on rules enacted by those who preceded him and who believed, or still believe, that they hold the secrets of life. Philosophers have cogitated, some approached wisdom with humility. From time immemorial, they helped their brothers by giving them basic knowledge to support their convictions. The human condition is touching, we all are working here to improve it and make sure that man is really enlightened."
