ove is both a subtle and powerful energy that can work miracles, which you attribute to the mental representation that you want. We are not referring here to men's notion of human love as directed to their fellow creatures. That love corresponds to human nature; therefore it is fragile and fickle. It can also have a solid base, when it is inspired by more profound reasons deeply rooted in a story which exceeds the framework of the current life. Love emanating from a pure heart is tinged with another light; it is imbued with this vibration that is maintained in this place where the metamorphosis is achieved. This kind of love lavished on humans does not require anything in return. It is granted as a privilege to souls totally dedicated to God. Through them, He works his wonders; He shakes up the hearts that appeal to Him in secrecy and reveals them to themselves. He has more than one means of conquering them; fate is said to be responsible for it. It is about a plan well established according to an unfailing frame.

"The Almighty attracts to Him the hearts that are ready to follow Him, carrying them in His divine wake, and the destination is the outcome [of this process]."
