Sunday, October 21, 2001 - 10:00 AM

Be happy, my daughter, this ashram that is a major concern to you has got its own marks. Ten years of life have dedicated it. A powerful strength emanates from it: the one we provide it with, so that it can fulfil its role as we told you at the time of its dedication. It is an anchor for the Mission and must be maintained in its present structure, even though it calls for some inner refurbishments. The place is favourable; it is located along an axis that corresponds to lines of force not detectable by human beings.

"The trying times that are brewing will give it a new importance: that of contemplation and prayer, in addition to its usual activity. This place should be preserved more than our candidates think about it. It is an all-appropriate shelter. The surface area that it offers for gatherings is not the major aspect.

"This place is sacred and in that capacity, it must be respected. It must be able to highly fulfil its purpose. It only needs a very strong aspiration of devotees to actually be given the activity it deserves. May it become what we expect it to be, everything happens in time. May the grace be with our brothers who devote time to it for the love of their Masters."

Babuji