Continue to advance as peacefully as possible. You should know that nothing irrevocable can happen to you, since you are in essence immortal.

"Your physical body is a costume [intended] for a [particular] stage of your evolution.

"You know this principle as well as all that we can tell you on the subject, but you are still reacting like the majority of humans – letting yourself be overwhelmed by the current difficulties. We are not criticising; we are only stating the inevitable facts.

"It takes a high level of wisdom to remain indifferent to ordeals. It is praiseworthy to progress towards detachment. You can assess your own progress; it results from your work and your forward movement.

"With hindsight, you can assess the progress made, by noticing changes that occurred on specific aspects, strong points of your personality that have modified themselves and led to more wisdom.

"There is no such thing as perfection; moving towards it is the noblest goal. You are advancing and you are delighted about this. Therefore continue with ardour; one day, the divine goal will be reached."
