Whispers from The Brighter World
A Fourth Revelation

Friday, November 2, 2001 - 10:00 a.m.

The machinery of the cosmos is extremely complicated. It would be difficult to give you a sufficiently explicit glimpse of it without confusing you. Science, in its current approach, does not take account of fundamental elements, which will remain beyond human comprehension for a long time yet, and things are better this way. The level of evolution does not lend itself to receiving knowledge that would be misused. Man is audacious; he does not hesitate to imperil the balance that is necessary for this planet. What would he be capable of, if he were imparted true knowledge? Man is the most dreadful predator. It is hard to curb his ambitions, his desire for conquest and power, dictated by low instincts.

"The development of current technology will increasingly endanger the balance of the Earth. This will result in chain reactions, uncontrollable and devastating.

"Man prefers to remain deaf to warnings which are given to him; he will have to suffer the ensuing consequences, as the process is irreversible."
