Loving God is a predisposition of the soul that can be expressed through a religion or in any other way. It seeks its channel, its food, at the moment suitable to it.

"When it has found its way, it can open out peacefully. All may not be able to find it in this incarnation, but love grows in them until the moment when they will be able to soar. Each experience is enriching, it is the frame of the heart that matters. The steps are cleared slowly, until the attainment of the level that will foster the expansion and the fulfilment of this blessed soul. With the passing incarnations, the experiments are varied; they are formative and reveal the progress of the soul. When the time comes, the way intended for it presents itself and allows it the final rise. The awakening can take place very slowly; many factors are the cause of it. Be that as it may, the moment will come when everything will be done to foster the attainment of the ultimate goal; it is in the nature of things."
