Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, April 4, 1999 – 8:00 a.m.

If you all do not play the game, we will not be able to take you along with us. You must trust in us completely, because at a certain level, this is an essential condition.

The work becomes increasingly subtle. There must be a kind of complicity between the aspirant and the Master.

It is a very precise work, which requires a certain attention. The Master and the disciple are welded together.

We have said enough to all of you about surrender. It is not enough to say, "I am surrendered"; being completely so is a true act of faith, a very profound commitment.

You all have to become very pliable. Do you want to be like that and to let yourselves be shaped in our image?

It is a choice.

It's up to you to see; we do not force anyone.
