Whispers from The Brighter World
A Third Revelation

Wednesday, March 6, 2002 - 10:00 a.m.

If men wanted to think well and to wonder how genuine seekers, in all areas, received the inspiration that guided them in their work, they would find answers in relation to what we ourselves are doing here. Knowledge does not come to man spontaneously, when it is about making important discoveries for mankind.

"All the beings that stood out in their time on this Earth and in the different areas were, quite simply, inspired. They were geniuses in the sense that their mind was receptive to this practice and they were passionate enough about their field. For the remainder, they were inspired advisedly. It always goes like that; nothing has changed or will change as long as this world will exist. As was said previously, some faculties are bound to develop in man, and will become in a remote future – this is worth specifying – quite common practice. Before rejecting this form of contact with us and refusing to understand the origin of these messages, our readers should better think a little and try to admit the principle of it, if not mentally, at least by letting a satisfactory answer that would enlighten them dawn in them from the bottom of their hearts."
