Yes, I used to come towards you frequently for quite a while, in answer to the wish of your revered guide. We had mixed and had great esteem for one another, the Master and the student having harmonised with one another. This episode was of great benefit to you, since you benefit now from the work we have done together. It is not easy for humans to assess this kind of performance. There is no degree ceremony, nor congratulations – what purpose would they serve? Only the result and the progress made by the disciple matters. Steadfastness, surrender and confidence are essential. They build him an edifice that will exist on beyond this lifetime. A way like yours is promising. It benefits from higher protections, and its light will keep growing in the future, bringing comfort and knowledge to valorous hearts. It gives you all the elements to do the best work. The revelations are inside you; they let themselves be revealed as you rise. They can emerge in you only under these conditions. They don't happen the other way, where they would not strike a chord as desired. Everything comes at the right moment. You will be enlightened at the right time when your heart has acquired its letters patent of nobility. Make sure you can read between the lines, and discover by yourself what is suggested to you. Everything will become clearer in you one fine day when you don't expect it any more, because then, you will become as one with it."
