Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, April 7, 1999 – 8:00 a.m.

You have to write what we tell you without questioning yourself. Your views are human, hence limited. Why should we remain within a strict framework? Don't put these kinds of restraints between us anymore.

You need to open your mind to more abstract things, otherwise our discourse will have to be limited to what we have been saying for years.

One has to evolve, I have already told you, accept being pushed.

The Medium: Forgive me, Babuji, I am bird-brained.

Now that you have gained in stature spiritually, try to have the brain of a golden eagle. Allow all this to settle, and stop censoring us.
