Yes, it is as simple as that; my Master says it perfectly. We all work on different levels to build a world, a Mission solid in every respect.

"It is being established, far from the current concepts, without publicity or sensational effects. It is in the making, quite simply, as long planned by the higher authorities. In this field nothing is left to chance, in spite of the inevitable difficulties in all projects, even spiritual ones. Each one adds his contribution to the edifice; thus are built things that defy time. The divine will always prevails. In implementing its plans, it [time] does not really matter. Its ways are not ours; the human being is not capable of understanding the major reasons supporting its intentions. So life continues apparently without any large-scale plan, and yet in the field of the spirit with which we are interested here, everything is thoroughly planned – which is completely beyond human understanding. Never mind. What must be will be; that is the way it has gone from time immemorial."
