Redemption is not due to one man only. It is a whole group of very special personalities that contribute to cleaning humanity. This word, used by the Christians, is not properly defined. Christ is not the only Son of God. All the great beings who punctuated the history of the world have been, and are, still actively involved in this work. They all will take part in it, until the end of time. When the Earth has reached its golden age, other rules will be established for it. They will have achieved their mission as far as it's concerned.

"Each religion always claimed to be the only one to hold 'the truth'. This results from men's ignorance. Some people, the most skilful, appropriate the teachings of the Masters by distorting them; the others accept them with utmost good faith. Redemption, let's keep calling it like this, will be done. You, yourselves, take part in it modestly by carrying out your personal work. By advancing, you take others along with you; an effect of osmosis is thus created.

"The same applies to evil, so widespread in this world and which produces the same effects. There will come a moment when the balance will lean towards the good side and the process will accelerate. It is one of the laws of the universe, which will prevail at the appropriate time. We will revert to these subjects, which you may consider obscure. Religious teachings are deeply rooted in you. You need time to assimilate this way of seeing. The evolution of the Earth continues inexorably; it, also, will reach the goal."
