Saturday, April 17, 1999 - 8:00 a.m.

Suffering is promising. Accept it when it comes. It is your best asset. It refines you. It is invaluable. One should not seek it, but consider it as a divine gift. You can really see that not everyone can read these lines. Yet this is what suffering is! Thank God. You are privileged to have been chosen. Your heart has softened; your soul has opened up to beauty. A happy life in the world would not have given you this result.

"We love hearts avid for the Absolute. Grace suffuses in them and carries them.

"Love us, my child, and say it; we are not weary of hearing it. This leitmotiv which resonates in you moves us."

The Medium: "I would love to be able to repeat it to you, my God, until my dying breath..."

"Walk on the enchanted bank, look at the sky, and call us from the depth of your being. We are there for you and for those who are in need. Advance, advance towards the light, with our blessings."

Babuji