Whispers from The Brighter World
A Third Revelation

Wednesday, September 4, 2002 - 10:00 a.m.

Come and revel in the Ineffable, my child. Enter this universe where a few moments make you foresee eternity. May your heart relish beauty; this plunging in Him makes you taste its delights. Here is what your devotion, your fervour in serving us and your perseverance bring to you in this moment. Keep this joy well, like a precious treasure concealed from the eyes of the others; it belongs only to you.

"Each one has their own, which is the fruit of their own search, and they use it as they please. To come and rejuvenate in Him is an easy thing; the heart knows the principle and what it is advisable to do for that. This diving into oneself is consoling for many sorrows inherent in this life on the Earth where man stumbles often, and sometimes gets up again with difficulty. This great sacrifice encourages him to seek a way out. The way is inside him, and eventually he discovers it. The access is easy. It will be necessary for him to seek; nothing is given without effort. God does not remain deaf to the call of His children when they beseech Him on their knees while looking to the sky. The thread that leads to Him can take him very far, making him go through many doors, while advancing with difficulty. Nothing is given without effort, even when grace embellishes the way. It remains for man's heart to go through all the stages and also, quite often, to be treated harshly.

"All that allows one to climb the path is good, since it leads sooner or later to light, which transforms all things, and especially fervent hearts."
