Did we ever abandon you to your ordeals? You know well that such is not the case. How could we do it when we are in contact on a daily basis, and we follow your progress step by step? Regain your calm. We help you as much as possible and we spare you from what can be avoided. Remain well in communion of heart with us; thus you will better perceive what we are telling you. Your path, by and large, cannot be modified; it is necessary for your evolution, which continues inevitably. By offering not only your heart to us, but your life, you can only foster it. How could we remain indifferent to what you are enduring, and which, despite everything, does not prevent you from listening to us with great perseverance? Continue to do your level best. You know the principle of acceptance as well as the graces it brings. Each step towards more love and surrender is gratifying; it gives a touch of light to this picture that is already quite elaborate. Your soul was shaped through the crucible of suffering and devotion. You set an example for those who love you and who try to understand you, as much as they can. Advance towards surrendering, more and more, to the divine will; we highly encourage you in that. We bless you, my daughter."
