On the level of consciousness where you are incarnate, your divine being remains in osmosis with the source, the core, as was said earlier. It is about a hidden life, which manifests itself as the heart opens up to reality. The evolution of the being allows this openness, giving him access to an esoteric knowledge in relation to his ability to understand. Long is the way to go, so that new horizons, promising in terms of the vast sphere of activity they imply, open doors hitherto closed. When the aspirant is ready, information comes to him; he manages to grasp the gist of that which did not manifest itself to him before. Nothing can be rushed in this field; we have already elaborated extensively on the issue. A life of search, geared towards the goal, yields results. The seeker is guided towards the source that is intended for him. He will receive according to his needs and at the desired pace. The more he asks, the more he receives; it is logical. If he is in the right way, the aspirations of his heart will be met. By calling God within him, he attracts the grace that clears his way and lights his path. Information will come to him, confirming him in his need to forge ahead. This need becomes obvious to him, henceforth, he will be motivated to go on until the end of his process."
