Whispers from The Brighter World

Tuesday, April 27, 1999 – 10:00 a.m.

You all have that pathological tendency not to accept the slightest criticism from your Masters.

We are bad because we dare, in certain circumstances, to criticize you.

What are things coming to! What poor weaklings you are. You want to advance, advance...but you fear the knocks.

You would prefer to be wrapped in a cocoon – shock-proof, pain-proof, sterilized... et cetera.

What to do with you!

Should we give up, as the parents of your time do? Do they act for the good of their children or simply offload their duty towards them?

Is this really what you expect of us? Take a good look at yourselves. Make your own choice, truly. If you want to continue, make yourself immune to your ego, don't be its slave anymore. Otherwise, how will we be able to make you advance.

We know, my daughter, that you take our criticisms well. Try to share your point of view with the others to make them aware of their weakness on this point.
