Monday, March 31, 2003 - 10:00 AM

In your destabilizing societies, one deserves credit for remaining centred on the Divine. One needs strength—the equilibrium that is precisely fostered by a regular spiritual progress. Our candidates can feel free in their practice; neither culpability nor domination is exerted whatsoever. Everyone faces up to their own responsibilities, being answerable to themselves only, in the presence of divinity and of their omnipresent Master who, nevertheless, does not force them to follow a way that may not be suitable for them.

"We offer to the researcher a means to support their evolution; there is absolutely no intention to have control over their lives and their way of thinking. We respect the personality of our brothers, since they remain in legality. They understand, with time, how our method does help them cope with life, which they henceforth do not see in the same way any more.

"Being aware of the fact that their stay on Earth is relatively short, reduces their burden when it gets too heavy. We can only encourage them to continue their search, in the detachment from wrong values related to illusory pleasures and to all that can be prejudicial to their elevation. They realize that the main thing is elsewhere, that this life represents only one step, in this long progress which leads them towards the goal which they set for themselves."

Babuji