As you can see it today, for a very long time we have been referring to the tragedy which is currently taking place. It is the pretext for a surge of hatred of unprecedented violence and exacerbated racism. Two worlds are confronting one another and passions are far from fading out. We can only note the extent of the disaster and prepare tomorrow's world when men will no longer live in blindness, as it is the case today.

"Spirituality will have to appear to them in a way divested of superfluity and especially so as to not encourage them to fight against one another. The new era will not put up any more with these clan fights that are despicably human. Man's spiritual nature will have to actually emerge and stand up above the low instincts that are currently leading the world. A complete transformation will have to occur and produce a race divested of all that is currently weakening it. This world will see the blossoming of a divine force, which will reinvigorate it in all its aspects.

"Let's come back to the change already mentioned, which will affect all living species, among which man is the central element. We cannot go further for the moment because of the risk of misleading people. Today's man is locked up in all sorts of beliefs, which we cannot shake up, too quickly."
