

Wednesday, April 16, 2003 - 10:00 AM

Love which is distilled through your heart is your most invaluable good. We have spoken very much in praise of love, but can one praise it sufficiently, since good only exists in Him? Human beings cannot easily understand this concept; it is about an energy, which they cannot evaluate and quantify using measures prevailing in this world. The fact that, like love, they also are only vibrations—as is all the rest of creation—escapes them completely.

"The vibration of divine love is the highest vibration; the most subtle and capable of transforming men's heart under the condition that they actually want to take part in it. Many are not receptive to it, hence the eternal conflicts which devastate this world and which let it stagnate at the current level of evolution. That will be the big combat of this century: ensuring that the humanity goes through this ultimate transformation. Will the operation succeed? Will it finally come out from it with increased stature and with the capacity for heading towards a different direction? Today's man can only contribute to the spirit of this major transformation by taking part in it for his own good, knowing that he is only a modest element of the gigantic puzzle. However the final victory depends on all such personal victories. May our candidates not lose sight of this objective; we are helping them in that."

Babuji