Whispers from The Brighter World
A Fourth Revelation

Friday, May 16, 2003 - 10:00 a.m.

Time has not come for you, my daughter, to go and discover other horizons. You must be satisfied with this world and what it offers to you by only seeing the good side of things.You are far from having penetrated all its hidden secrets, therefore be prepared to discover some of them. Your extrasensory perceptions are a heaven-sent gift; don't forget it, even if sometimes it can become burdensome.

"This planet is a field of experience, which offers great possibilities to the researcher. A curious person manages to be satisfied in the many fields in which his competence comes out.

"This need for discoveries can also apply to himself. He often feels it after multiple explorations do not manage to quench his thirst. When he eagerly commits to this long process, he manages to channel forces that clear his way to inspiring horizons.

"He can then understand, after having walked a lot outside, that the wonder was within him. His curiosity of the external world decreases in proportion to the interest shown in measuring the extent of his discoveries. So, God is in him and he has still to climb this sacred mountain that fills him with wonder, yet without being able to estimate its real beauty.

"Consequently, all his ardour will be focused on this research. He will advance at his own pace, calling in his heart the most reliable guide capable of leading him towards the successful outcome of this blazing search."
