Live each and every day as being a godsend. Tomorrow will be as it must be and the way you figure it out is not necessarily right. Do not dwell on your daily worries, create your own heavens, and build masterpieces to the glory of the Divine, to the love that characterizes it. Set aside the monotony of the days, as you have known since a long time; the heavens are in you. You have leeway to act in this respect. Your songs are heard, and they can be repeated everyday without being boring. You have the greatest freedom on this point; you can benefit from them as you please. Anyone can use this way of escape.

"Nobody is confined to this distressing material world. Each human being can find in himself the way to life, the divine life as it is offered to all those who seek it. Whatever the method employed, which can be more or less appropriate, the appeal emanating from a passionate heart is always heard and judiciously guided. It insistently calls for guidance, and the Master appears when it is ready. That is the starting point of its progress. Many of our brothers find it difficult to understand this requirement, which is not common in your countries given over to materialism. They end up understanding the principle, when the inner appeal gets more and more pressing and requires a well-targeted action. One has to live this experience to really understand it. Alone, the researcher is limited to his smallness; a mammoth work is ahead of him, yet he does not have the necessary calibre."
