Wednesday, May 28, 2003 - 10:00 AM

In the coming years, the Mission will go through an expansion phase, a kind of invigorating recovery. Everything is being set up to this end and that is only the beginning. Our way will mark the dawning era with a new spirit where spiritual research will be followed as a personal process suited to the needs of everyone, far from any ideology. Our candidates are free in their search and they are only answerable to themselves. Their progress hinges on their arduous practice supported by the work of an omnipresent Master.

"The Mission is being structured favourably, despite difficulties prevailing in many points, centres or ashrams; it cannot be otherwise. Our brothers and sisters are doing their level best, but cohesion cannot be obtained easily due to the prerogatives of the human environment. In spite of these mishaps, the result to date is positive and bodes well for a good success in the future.

"It is comforting to see how much each one tries to put oneself into it, considering that the life of our system also depends on one's commitment. Whoever he is, he is useful. It should be well understood that at the material level, our abhyasis play an important role, which they should not underestimate.

"May the Mission become what it was planned to be long ago, and offer to the world what it needs so much."

Babuji