Monday, June 30, 2003 - 10:00 AM

Jealousy is a human fault. It is like poison in men's hearts: a plague with a detrimental effect on their evolution. By keeping a close check on oneself, one can evaluate how much it impacts on them and correct himself as far as possible. A true brotherhood should be established on this Earth. What seems completely utopian today will perhaps materialize tomorrow. This world is entangled in a net, which it cannot be easily released from. It sank into a mud from which virtue can hardly emerge, thus impeding the manifestation of the true nature of man. Through its typical work, our way is operating a critical cleaning in the context of this program. Its first goal is liberation, which once generalized will appear as no small matter.

"By generally working to that end, our system is meeting the requirements of this dawning century aimed at leading human beings to a collective awareness about their true nature of divine essence. It is mistreated more than ever in this magma, persecuting it in its current cycle of evolution, and not enabling him to advance at the foreseen pace. It will be necessary to resort to drastic measures to clean up humanity that is hardly disentangling itself from its coating of mud which does not make it radically different from the other kingdoms, as man tends to believe. Life remains a mystery for him and he would be astounded by reality if he could access it."

Babuji