Make this effort for your Master for a little more time. Don't you see that he appreciates these messages? His heart can understand their suggested meaning, which is the main thing! We gave him our vision, the Mission's future, in broad outline. He can grasp all the relevant nuances and take them into account in his action. These lines are not written in vain, they will not have unanimous support, but who could?

"My son is carrying out his mission very courageously, beyond the requirements of a sometimes intractable physical body. He is pursuing his road under the vigilant attention of those who support and also accompany him from our world.

"Does our scribe want to give up? We hope not, since rigor and perseverance are her major assets. Moments of weariness belong to the human career. We understand them, as we experienced them. Everyone, here below, must complete their plan of life on this Earth. Things cannot be otherwise. The stress and all sorts of difficulties must be left behind to allow wisdom acquired over the years to reassert itself. Life is full of both happy and unhappy experiences. They lead hearts that are ready to see them just as they are--momentary and enriching when considered with lucidity--and to stand back as is necessary. No human being escapes this rule; one must abide by it and benefit from its related possibilities. Assessments will take place in due time, they will be revealing, nobody will be spared by their rigor and ensuing results. That is the law of life, it is divine law, that is the way it goes, my child."
