Whispers from The Brighter World
A Fourth Revelation

Tuesday, August 19, 2003 - 10:00 a.m.

There is always matter to comment on, my daughter. Life is a series of new beginnings. It occurs in the endless repetition of facts and, consequently, in the teachings provided herein.

"Our brothers will be able to find in the teachings what seems good to them, at the suitable moment when they can receive it.

"The intellect has its own views. The heart on the other hand has more precise needs, known only to it. These words constantly repeated are a balm to a hidden suffering, which often results in a malaise for the aspirant who is keen for sustenance to help him understand what is happening in him. In our process, no aspect should be neglected. Today's man is saturated with all kinds of information which his spiritual being does not need at all.

"He needs to interiorise himself, to return to his initial simplicity, that which is appropriate to the true mystic. His heart is looking forward to daily sustenance, to simple words bringing him back to his own truth.

"Do not mind the repetitions: they are necessary, as you know. Don't you also experience it! That, to which you were insensitive yesterday, makes sense in you today. It is an issue of the inner state which is beyond the control of the researcher. He needs to feel rejuvenated, to find a source convenient to him, to hear an inspired word or read some sentences which can touch him. Many hearts are hopelessly searching for sustenance suitable to them; may our way, with all that it offers, fully meet this expectation."
