The Mission must follow its destiny, in terms of good and bad aspects, and all human aspects. It was put in place among men for men. Each one can distinguish himself, and write his own history in it. It is better to do it on an appropriate tone, without wrong notes, with brilliance and--especially--with love. Let us feel sorry for those who besmirch it, and let us praise God, for He makes it blazing and redeeming in the service of this suffering humanity. Working for its good is synonymous with building it according to divine plans. Nothing stops the course of history. Men may come and go. All is ups and downs. The Mission will carry on, on its way for the good of all those who will make it live and will give it its letters patent of nobility."
