Wednesday, October 1, 2003 - 10:00 AM

Surrender and trust, these are the greatest powers of a heart that wants to become like the heart of a child. Love can easily develop in it as nothing can hinder the special relationship binding Master's heart with that of the aspirant. In this relationship, one should act out of self-interest, straight and to the point. Here it is a state of non-egotistic reactions. It is not a question of shining near the Master, but one should nurse an unconditional love for him surpassing the human framework. This kind of love is rare.

"A heart that surrenders completely is outside the conventions governing this world. It goes beyond its limits and it is built at other levels that are indestructible. They reinforce the égrégore[7] of the Mission, of our way, the purpose of which is only to help humanity in its evolution. It attracts the souls that are strengthened among themselves in this reserved space. What occurs on Earth, in this material world, finds its counterpart, but of a more purified nature, at higher levels of consciousness. What is concealed from men's eyes is very important. Their current condition does not enable them to figure it out. Anyway, divine laws are immutable and do not take account of the laws of men at the current level of their evolution. It is not easy for them to admit this reality, as in addition they have no way of making comparisons. They can trust us and work seriously. For them, time is running out."

Babuji

[7] An égrégore is a kind of group mind which is created when people consciously come together for a common purpose. Therefore it has the characteristic of having an effectiveness greater than the mere sum of its individual members. It can also refer to the psychic and astral entity of a group.