Saturday, October 11, 2003 - 10:00 AM

May the time soon come for the liberation of men, advancing on the painful way on which they are advancing. Our action is only geared toward that. We need no indoctrination, no domination, in the world where our action takes place. Our way has only one goal: to help men in their progress, by making them become aware of the main things which do not exist here below in the gross joys adapted to this world. It is not easy for a human being to distance himself from all that is proposed to him. A true spiritual process is critical in the matter as it allows one to sufficiently stand back to put things in perspective.

"Regular practice helps one to consider life from a different perspective, put things into perspective, and to stand aloof from some gross situations, from which one's way out is dubious. The only recourse—and man's unique recourse—is God. He often comes to this conclusion when everything is bad and seems desperate. Will it be necessary for the extreme situation to occur on Earth, so that he would turn to Him for good? It seems that only that extreme will bring the majority back to this final conclusion.

"The advent of this divine power is approaching. Man will have to face the facts and to yield to the laws that he has too long ignored. Our spiritual way is one of the means of assistance offered to him. Purified humanity will be able to make the choices that will then prevail, and which from now on are at its disposal."

Babuji