My daughter,

"You are progressing in this discovery: to love one's Master truly, beyond any human criteria to which our aspirants generally confine themselves. Here, the heart gets into a spiral as endless as infinity, which feeds it. A Master of the stature of your Master, passed all the stages leading to the total Being—as you call it—being completely realized in God and beyond. While incarnate, he cannot actually realize this state, for he would not be able to withstand the entire power of its vibratory load. He is on mission on the Earth and, consequently, limited by human characteristics. Things cannot be otherwise.

"The main thing to him is to achieve what he came into this world for, even if this process proves sometimes painful. What will remain of all these ordeals after the mission has been accomplished: feeling satisfied for having done one's best in the service of divine power. Shady areas bring the best to light; the only aspects emerging are the positive and the constructive ones that can help men move through darkness, driven by a profound call guiding them towards their higher destiny. Be in complete surrender. You have the good luck that few human beings have on this Earth: to have a Master capable of leading you, under the best conditions, to where you must go. Be confident; this relation is an invaluable good. Take advantage of each moment of grace offered to you. Be at peace, and love us."
