An unprecedented work will be achieved on Earth, so that it can finally reach a level of consciousness well above the one it has currently. This prospect is to be considered in every respect, including preparation at very subtle levels. Nothing must be neglected for the great divine plans to be fulfilled. This change will take place in view of planetary upheavals exceeding the framework of the Earth, which, in the future, will have to align itself with a different vibratory approach.

"All evolves and changes in the universe where the notion of time does not exist; but strict rules, escaping men's control, harmonize and balance the movements necessary to the cohesion of a whole, whose complexity is well above human understanding. All assumptions made by man concerning the new era, which is very much spoken about, do not stand up to analysis for lack of enlightened arguments. The important thing, for him, does not lie there. The only thing to be considered is his own progress. He cannot get involved in the effects subsequent to cycles exceeding the limits of his own existence. Infinitely small within the framework of these structures, he endures without any other recourse than faith, and his determination to progress at all costs. What could he do? The greatest discoveries in the eyes of men are mere wisps of straw, without any importance in the great divine play. All will be swept away, at the appropriate time.

"May all our brothers progress in the way of wisdom, by considering ours as a means of achieving that."
