Wednesday, May 12, 1999 – 8:00 a.m.

Yes, it is good to send good thoughts to my son; he is happy, though very tired. We are keeping him going so he can continue to shoulder his heavy task.

You can see from the pictures and the plans the grandeur of this achievement; he has supervised everything. The development of this new complex has given him so much trouble, it is unimaginable. The Indian workforce is not what you know here, yet everything is done with such heart that, with effort upon effort, the result obtained is perfect.

As I have already said, this celebration, with the construction of this sanctuary, marks the beginning of an era of expansion for the Mission.

This ceremony has struck the minds of brothers and sisters present, and of those who have connected to it through the heart.

This seed received by each one of them will spread widely.

Be happy – you also, who love your Masters – you all belong to a large and strong body, which is at the beginning of a long and fruitful march.

Rest, my daughter, be blessed.

The Medium: Oh, thank you, Babuji, for this beautiful image you give us. I no longer feel 'handicapped', I am like the others, and I want to walk with them in this large body – it's wonderful!

Note this down.

Babuji