Come to refresh yourself from the source, my child; this day is a little special because of the peacefulness it offers to you. Come and rejoin us and benefit from this contact, by letting your heart go into its natural and spontaneous inclination. Love is the thread of your life; it brought you toward us after some detours. We all went through that. It is not useless to have gone through some experiences in this field; but when the way is found, no more time should be wasted.

"Some resistance can be put up, the human being is like that, but he cannot escape his own destiny and wisdom ends up prevailing. It is good, don't you think, to pull oneself together in God, to rediscover every time the best of oneself. This invaluable cocoon where divine life is preserved is there, omnipresent and rich in terms of treasures. The discovery is before you, it remains for you to explore it completely. At each step the beauty of the place unfolds, encouraging the soul to continue its quest. It is here, precisely, that you can overcome your reserve and let it express its real joy.

"You are before yourself, trustful in your Master, he henceforth holds the whole place and he guides you for your own good. Advance in this direction, by letting your heart express itself above all; it is reliable. It does not know any vain flight of enthusiasm. Its line is all mapped out. Until the end of this life, it will follow it. By finding our way, it found its true life.

"Yes, this message is addressed to you. It is a well-known process: by extension, it is addressed to all. The course of the souls starts and finishes at the same point; although the meanderings of the courses are different, all end up finding the source, ineluctably. God is Great, His mercy is infinite; let us all work to serve Him, according to His views and His will."
