

Wednesday, March 3, 2004 - 10:00 AM

Being incarnate on this Earth, it is appropriate to take part in the movement of life, in all its manifestations. This activity is necessary; steering clear of it has no beneficial effect on the construction of the being. Life in this world is an educational and decisive test, in most cases. Our most fervent aspirants are, in their life, active and determined to do what is required, to make a success of it in every respect. On no account could we request them to withdraw from society, such is not our purpose.

"Achieving one's spiritual fulfilment within the framework of a normal human existence is all the more a praiseworthy fact, and we encourage it. The experience of daily life with its difficulties, its joys and its sorrows, constantly offers the means of growing. We have good reasons to recommend this kind of existence: we knew it and experienced it. Over all the past centuries and up to now, this planet has been a place of experiment and orientation of the souls-to-be.

"Another cycle is in the offing. It will relate to a different mode of existence, capable of fostering an expression of life more spiritually enlightening. The features will differ and the selection will be straightforward, as far as the results are concerned. The man of the future will feel more concerned with his evolution and will be mature in the sense that, contrary to what he does today, he will not neglect what he will consider as the main things.

"Times change, these cycles on the Earth are very long, but they always end up coming to an end. Another side of the evolution of humanity is dawning on the horizon. We are working in that direction. Tomorrow will be decisive, by the grace of God."

Babuji