Whispers from The Brighter World
A Fifth Revelation

Wednesday, April 14, 2004 – 9:30 a.m.

What is hidden in the heart of each creature is a mystery to the others, but also to the creature itself, as it does not possess the code allowing it to access its own heart. The human being is an enigma and so will it remain for as long as this Earth is subjected to the current laws of its own evolution.

"Everything must change in accordance with the plans related to unprecedented changes for the Earth. They will occur within a broader framework, in terms of universal structures. Nothing is immutable – even these universal structures are subjected, to some extent, to an ascending and transforming wave. Men cannot observe such phenomena, as they are limited to an approach that they believe to be infallible. They are victims of their own limitations and are misled as far as essential aspects are concerned.

"Real changes will emanate from man's heart; in him and without his knowledge, future worlds are being built. Life has reached a phase of expansion unverifiable by humans who are confined to their very limited views, even those people who believe they possess the truth. No human creature possesses it. As we have already said many times before on this point, future times will shed some light for advanced beings who are dedicated to the good in this world and accessing – through means not yet recognised – the only sources of knowledge likely to truly enlighten humanity about its future.

"Blinkers will have to be removed and give way to a broader vision of phenomena, so that it may sweep away all the mental constructions of the past that have confined people to mere misconceptions. Man, in his physical body, will be different. In that also, changes will not be limited to the environment; they will take place on all levels, it is inevitable. We will revert to this."
