These messages will remain one of the characteristics of the history of our way. With them, in addition to the writings of its various Masters, a source of varied information will be at the disposal of our aspirants.

"My son is inspired in many ways, allowing him to lead our Mission towards the goal set for it, for both the present and the future, when it will take on its full meaning, in an appropriate context. It will be part of the current climate, capable of providing answers to questions exceeding those facing our brothers today. Minds will open out at a dizzying pace without finding true answers in what was their previous life, which will seem devoid of meaning compared to what they will live then. They will be in search of explanations and we will have to satisfy them.

"The spiritual will prevail, sweeping away misconceptions, rebuilding humanity as foreseen in the plans of its evolution. There will be a lot to do. Conflicts are bound to take place in all this. Giving up privileges acquired over centuries will not be easy. All these changes seem utopian today. God is great; He lets men get bogged down in their outrageous expansion, which makes them continue to drift into the worst excesses and which then culminates into unprecedented cataclysms.

"Our brothers of the future will have to be strong, physically and psychologically. Life will not be easy on this Earth, but it will be rebuilt on the basis of good and evil, which are being currently neglected, hence its misfortune and similar calamities.

"Love will prevail over all. This optimistic vision will conclude and comfort after a gloomy picture of the future of the world.

"May all be blessed and remain confident in their destiny."
