Whispers from The Brighter World
A Fifth Revelation

Wednesday, April 28, 2004 – 10:00 a.m.

Poor are those who do not live on love and whose life is confined to material things, its pleasures and money. Money is essential, but it becomes dangerous if it confines a human being solely to its power.

"We are not moralists; we try to show the way, to light it, thus facilitating the progress of our aspirants. There is another life beyond this one. They know it and they are preparing for it under the spiritual guidance of their Master.

"The progress made by our brothers, whose number increases each year, can be well assessed during the big gatherings in our Mission, which also generate more fervour. They are important in many respects: they allow each person to take stock and, for some brothers, they are an opportunity to take a critical look at their own gaps.

"These seminars are essential and profitable for all. They develop the cohesive power that emanates from all the participants, and they enhance the image of our way that is gaining ground in hearts, silently, just by divine will. We propose, we do not impose. Only the seeker's aspiration to be elevated is decisive in this matter.

"Men will increasingly seek the means of truly progressing. They possess the treasure in themselves; we show them how to reach it and make it bear fruit. This achievement requires some effort. Man expends so much effort running here and there after futile concerns, which he believes are necessary for his life, even if they do not lead anywhere. Only his spiritual maturity will make him aware of the need to make more suitable choices.

"May all our brothers assemble and benefit from this union of hearts; it deserves very special blessings."
