Whispers from The Brighter World

A Fifth Revelation

Wednesday, May 5, 2004 – 10:00 a.m.

My child, everything stems from this principle: life regenerates life, life is one and divine in its manifestation. Work [carried out] in our way is one of the aspects of this power that is optimally used for the good of our aspirants. The human being cannot easily understand these principles as he is rooted in a world where the limits of knowledge sustain his ignorance of the facts. The subtle world that surrounds him is strange to him. Some have antennas: they perceive other forms of life and communicate with them. It is high time for everyone's blinkers to be removed and for a certain form of truth to finally emerge, bringing within their reach the reality of their incarnation in this world – in its ephemeral essence.

"Humanity can only truly progress with a new understanding of the infinite machinery of life; it is a minor element compared to the Great Whole from which it emanates. Man gives himself an importance that he doesn't have, while the Immutable within is not apparent to him. For whoever rises into other spheres, planet Earth becomes a dot among many, neither more nor less important, a mere element merged into the admirable architecture of the universe.

"Each form of life is important; wherever it may exist, it is both autonomous and entirely guided. Such are the divine laws, which are obscure to man. What does he know about himself, about the secret of his own life, where he comes from and where he will go when his life has been completed on Earth? It will continue in another form; other experiences will take place, formative and redeeming for his personality when his long journey has been completed, and before he is immersed in the absolute reality, which is a well-kept secret of divine life."
