Whispers from The Brighter World
A Fifth Revelation

Saturday, May 15, 2004 – 10:00 a.m.

Time sweeps away the memory of what is irrelevant. Divinely inspired writings are an exception, and [time] maintains them in men's minds over the centuries. Thus, these words, capable of helping them, keep their power and maintain the sacred flame. Each important period in the history of the world had this privilege giving it a guideline. As humanity is nearing a pivotal point of its evolution, another enlightening guidance can now be given to it.

"That is how the higher powers manifest themselves, namely as they deem appropriate. When a soul is ready to rise, it must find the necessary guidance. There is a wealth of diversity among men and consequently they must be offered various ways to find themselves. A day will come when unity will take place in the teachings and in hearts. Victory will finally be there for progress which was desired and finally attained. The people of the Earth will have to find themselves without any distinctions; a joint teaching should bring them closer and unite them.

"Let us work constantly towards this grandiose future; this project is not an impossible dream. The history of the world will keep the memory of the difficult steps that preceded it; a victory like this one must be earned. Our way does not condemn. It tries to show the way to men of goodwill, motivated to go towards what they believe is just and good for them, and for all those who commit to this path. They do not go off course; time will give them the evidence.

"May all our brothers be enlightened and pacified, and progress, unprejudiced and ignorant of hatred, towards the final apotheosis."
