Whispers from The Brighter World
A Fifth Revelation

Thursday, June 3, 2004 – 10:00 a.m.

Humans see life using a distorted mirror. They have groundless certainties fixed in their minds.

"All is only illusion in this world; we have repeatedly said this. Many believe they are superior, yet they are subjected to the same principles, and most importantly they, like the others, actually do not possess the truth. This world is a place of experiences; the condition of each human being is a function of the work to be achieved in this incarnation.

"The spectrum is rather wide; it offers a certain number of possibilities for the diversity of roles. The social and human differences must be seen from that standpoint, and not in terms of legitimate prerogatives when the role to be played is gratifying. Humility is supreme. It makes the soul grow. There is no small or big role; all beings are equal before the Creator of all things.

"This point is crucial: everyone is to be respected accordingly. By accepting it, one takes a big step towards wisdom. Who is man to dare judge his neighbour? Is he perfect himself? Even if he was, he could not assume the right to judge others. This point deserves careful thought on the part of our brothers, as this failing is widespread among men in an appalling way that is harmful to their evolution. We insist on this point in order to once more draw attention to this serious handicap that is very widespread in this world. God is the sole judge, employing His own methods, and not that of His creatures.

"May all our aspirants question themselves seriously on what can hinder their progress! May all be blessed and strengthened in their process."
