A world parallel to yours exists, which has been ignored by men, even though many phenomena take place there, without being recognized by them. For that world too, the time has not come when they can be appreciated at their true value. Human beings are advancing blindly, but they do not know it. As far as they are concerned, they have misconceptions of their own reality, as well as what surrounds them. It would be useless to seek to look further into the question: they cannot conceive the truth for the time being.

"An important page of history concerning humanity will have to be turned so that they can foresee other, more realistic, prospects. May our brothers wonder about the true mystery of life and shape themselves actively, with a view to a beneficial approach to their evolution. These messages will have to be considered by them, initially, as food for thought on the capability offered to some beings to receive what they themselves cannot seize vibrationally.

"Man of the future will refine himself considerably in his perceptions, which will allow him to develop a more subtle approach to these manifestations currently surpassing him. Denying what he does not understand is a negative attitude going against his own evolution. By trusting us, our aspirants demonstrate a degree of maturity favourable to their spiritual process, which is the focus of all our attention."
