Regain stature, my child. Far from this world where good and evil exist side by side, there is a universe of beauty, accessible as of now, to a soul on request. Let it follow its inclinations, for they are noble and they send you into transports of joy. This mystical joy is unparalleled; in this moment you would love to plunge within yourself, and taste these delights without having to control the hand writing these lines. They try to translate here, the emotions which sadhana can provide, leaving you on the occasion on the dividing line between two states of consciousnesses.

"Immersing in one's own Self, and plunging completely in devotion, provides peace that harmonizes the subtle bodies because of a better alignment fostering spiritual work. Meditating is being united with God, with this incommensurable power, and in our way, under the control of and with reference to a high level Master. Meditating like that is to balance one's life, to give it a meaning in compliance with divine laws, which few human beings respect. This dimension facilitates the afterlife on Earth; it clarifies the being, concerning the aspects unfavourable to his evolution.

"This way is fruitful in every respect. May our brothers be fully aware of this; the brevity of life in this world calls for the essentials not to be ignored. Sticking to the aspirations of the soul is a sign of wisdom auguring well for the best.

"May all be enlightened and blessed."
